

Thursday, April 26, 1951

East Twin River Overflows Banks

ing of the East Twin river greatly improved the polluted condition of the East Twin river, washing away the silt from its banks and bottoms.

Banks of the East Twin river from a point three miles north of Two Rivers extending to the village of Mishicot overflowed in numerous places as a result of the steady rain which came to an end late Wednesday.

The most widely inundated area was just north of the Rehrauer farm on highway 147, five miles north of Two Rivers, where the water of the East Twin had spread within 15 feet of the concrete pavement.

At Mishicot late Thursday afternoon the water level was at its highest point in a number of years. Had it rained another night residents along the river feared serious property damage, for many of the basements of homes and business places would have been flooded.

Sportsmen and conservationists in the area said the flood-

Rained & Rained.

EAST TWIN RIVER INVADES PASTURE LAND—Flood waters roared down the East Twin river from Mishicot to inundate more than 25 acres of pasture land on the Rehrauer farm, slightly over four miles from Two Rivers on highway 147. The East Twin is about 60 feet wide at this point, but steady rains the past few days caused the stream to swell over 400 feet of the farm land, submerging as much as three feet of many of the elm trees. This view was taken on the north side of the Rehrauer home. (Photo by staff photographer Bob Halverson)